“ I believe the eldest woman in a family is the leading matriarch. Esther Neider helped instill the character and values in the family members that I know now with love. This family is mine through the marriage of Sandra, my daughter, to Terry, her grandson. Terry is an outstanding man with so many skills and talents. She certainly influenced him. He is a wonderful young man. She is the mother of David who is now the father-in-law of my daughter Sandra Neider. David is a wonder father and brings his sons, Terry and Tony to me as men with strength of mind and leading values. Her efforts made in raising these men made me at home with them and with her grandchildren that I met, Gavin and Elle. She was and is a model for women and her daughter-in-law is Angie Neider whom I love as family too. Her family will miss her wisdom, conversations and leadership. I know her family will remember the good times. While I did not know Esther, I will come to Wyoming with joy knowing that I am coming home to family too.

“ The influence of the eldest woman in a family is remarkable. She is the matriarch. She leads by example. I did not know Esther. As I think about her passing now, I realize that she provided a positive and strong role model as a grandmother and an elder. The men and the women in her family reaped the benefit of her guidance, I feel. It is clear to me that her efforts and love showed because she certainly influenced how easily I got to know some of her family. Some of Esther's family came to Sandra's and Terry's recent wedding. Soon, I hope to come to Wyoming to visit my loving new family. I will come with joy knowing that I am coming to visit family made strong in part by Esther Neider's values and character.
