“ I was deeply saddened to hear of Jason’s passing. He had a truly genuine personality that made everyone around him feel welcome and valued, and his comedic sense of humor could brighten even the toughest days. Jason had a special way of bringing laughter and joy to those who knew him, and his presence will be greatly missed. My heartfelt condolences go out to his family, friends, and all who were fortunate enough to know him. He will be remembered fondly and missed more than words can express.

“Hi, I know it's taken me a while to write this. I am heartbroken. This is written as if it were more to Jason instead of about him. As we always have so many words left unsaid. It was only two weeks ago we were making plans for the summer. The same plans we've made for last summer and the summer before and the summer before thinking we had so many more summers to make up for it! I remember how excited you were about those plans as I walked out of the room the last time I saw you. I too was excited thinking to myself. This is gonna be one heck of a good time and we're gonna come out of the other side on the top of the mountain!! You were the reason well, you and dad and Uncle Mike one of the reasons I was still walking down that road. When I was down and low, having a hard time believing in myself, it was one of you that came in and picked me up. Encouraging me validating me and giving me the drive to keep going. But that was you in every way. More often than not I would fall to the ground and look up. And it was you standing above me, reaching out your hand telling me to get up and shake it off! You never lectured me. He never judged me. You never got upset. You never told me I was wrong. Only reminded me that I knew a better way. You never spoke ill of me or tolerated anybody else doing so. Especially when it wasn't true. You made sure that the truth was known as you stood there surrounded by a room full of lies. And you'd stay until my feet were steady enough to hold me up, and I could continue on my way. And when I would start in with that crazy talk.. things others would just look at me, roll their eyes and say this chick is nuts, you just smile and like dad and Uncle Mike, go check it out for yourself Before saying a word. Then I'd get that phone call... not only did you go check for yourself, but you had even more to add to that "crazy talk" showing me that not only you believed in me but where invested in my thoughts, feelings, and well being. The Times that it turned out, maybe I wasn't on the right path in my thought process, you kindly shared your opinion in view on the subject and left it at that. I could be completely transparent with you and share all of my feelings and thoughts and no matter what you used that to pick me up to build me up. And remind me of the things I have done and the things I am capable of. I don't think I can ever remember you having a scowl on your face towards me or even being grouchy with me. You always let me know that you are looking forward to seeing me and you enjoyed our time together. You woke up every day viewing the world through those positive lenses! You didn't talk bad about people. You didn't try making somebody else's shortcomings an excuse for your own! If somebody came to you with an issue or was talking s on you you didn't get mad at them and come back all defensive, you would take a few minutes and put yourself in their shoes and try to view things from where they were standing before you responded; accepting what you owned of it, always being respectful and kind, you would speak your mind. You just loved people and you saw the good way more than the bad! You thought for yourself never letting anybody make up your mind for you! The thing I see the most as I look back on our time together is support, love kindness some good times and a lot of laughter. Oh man, the laughter especially the day that girl called trying to recruit us to help her teach her boyfriend a lesson! We were laughing so hard our stomachs hurt! Oh, my gosh and the weekend TK got the tick!! That whole weekend I spent telling him knock it off, you're not going to get a tick when he would freak out about it every five seconds, even getting a little irritated and short with it all, just to get him home and find a tick! Neither of us quite sure how to get it out. We grabbed a little bit of everything! That poor kid was in a panic screaming, I told you I told you! After you got it out and he left the room. You looked at me and stated see he got a tick and we just laughed at the irony of it all!! I don't think I have a bad memory of you. Not even the ones that were a little challenging ever turned out bad! And then when dad got sick... you dropped everything to help. Never complaining, even when his mind started playing tricks on him, and he became a little confused and things were difficult. I am so grateful for the kindness love support and sacrifice you gave of yourself in our dad's time of need. I loved your view of the world seeing all of the good and beauty in it and being so passionate about righting the wrongs! Although I am deeply pained by your passing I am also so deeply grateful and blessed to have shared the time with you that I had! I am very proud that you called me sister. And having you for a little brother was probably one of the greatest blessings of my life! I'm gonna miss you so very much! I will see you again on the other side. I love you little brother!
