“ Grandpa was a special man in my life. We lived with him and Grandma for a year in California back in the early 80s.

He taught me many things. How to throw a punch, how to defend myself, how to talk to girls, how to be self-confident, and how to swim. He taught me about expectations in life, and about stern discipline and consequences, without resorting to corporal punishment. The worst punishment he could give me was to say he was disappointed in me. That stung more than a backhand would have.

In essence, he did all the things a father should have done.

I love you Grandpa, I am gonna miss you.

Oh yeah. He taught me golf. :)

The memorys I have the most are ones from the time we spent with Uncle Roland and aunt Pauline when they lived in California. Roland took me golfing and on our return I ask what he thought? He looked at me and smiled and said "Son don't quit your day job" The next day Roland and dad {Joel} decided we needed to take drive. We loaded the wives and Randy and me and the next thing i know we are surrounded by hippies on sun set strip,they are trying to tip the car over and they are knocking them off us with fire hoses! I can still remember Aunt Pauline hollering " Roland if we get out of this alive I am going to kill you!!!" I am the only one that was in that car that is left. Family we need to cherish those memorys for too soon that is all we have left.We had great people in our lives let us never forget them. Rick T
